OBSTINATE FIGHTING CONTINUES.

FRENCH STAND SHOCK OF ENEMY FORCES.

LOST GROUND RE-CAPTURED BY FRENCH.

London, June 3, 12.15 a.m.

The battle has continued, especially north of the Oure to the Marne, where the enemy made his main efforts.

Our troops withstood the shock of the enemy forces with obstinate bravery.

The enemy succeeded in regaining possession of Faverelles, but the attacks on Corcy and Treignes failed.

Our attacks west of Neuilly St. Front drove back the enemy on Tassy-en-Valois.

We re-took Hill 168, immediately west of it.

After desperate fighting further south of the Forey Bourges front two successive enemy attacks were broken down.

On the right we re-captured Chagny and gained ground in the direction of Ville-en-Tardenois.

The situation elsewhere is unchanged.

SUCCESSFUL OPERATIONS ON BRITISH FRONT.

LINE ADVANCED AND 193 PRISONERS TAKEN.

London, June 3.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig reports:—

"We carried out successful operations in the neighbourhood of Vieux Berguin and Meris, advanced our line slightly at these points, took 193 prisoners and captured a number of machine-guns and trench mortars. Our casualties were light."

"We successfully raided to the south-east of Arras, to the north-west of Lens, and to the west of Merville, taking 26 prisoners and capturing three machine-guns and a trench mortar."

"We repulsed raiders to the south of Villers Bretonneux."

COUNTER-REVOLUTIONARY PLOT IN RUSSIA.

WORKMEN COMPULSORILY CALLED TO ARMS.

London, June 3.

The Press Bureau states:—

A Russian wireless reports that the executive of the Soviets decided on May 20th to compulsorily call to arms the workmen and the poorer peasants of the Petrograd, Moscow, Cuban and the Don regions. They have declared martial law in Moscow and have ordered wholesale arrests of counter-revolutionaries and vigorous measures against the Press.

The report says a great counter-revolutionary plot, supported by foreign capital, was discovered at Moscow and Petrograd with ramifications throughout Russia. The plot was responsible for the mutiny of the Tebechoslovak Corps, which captured the railway junctions and lines.

Large owners in other regions are mobilising the richer peasants to resist the commandeering of flour. Agents in the cities, including the starving masses, are against the Soviets. Depots of flour in Kuban and Don are menaced by a counter-revolutionary band, which hopes to provoke foreign intervention.

The Soviets are confident of crushing the starting mutiny in the industrial and corn-growing provinces to frustrate the plot.

NEW SPIRIT IN GREECE.

CHANGED BEARING OF NATIONAL GREEK ARMY.

SMARTNESS AND ENTHUSIASM.

The young men of Greece are now, states the Athens correspondent of "The Times," making a very fine response to the national call to arms. It is no exaggeration to say that a wave of enthusiasm for the war is sweeping over the country. Only people akin in character to the Latins like the Greeks could have exhibited such an incredibly sudden change from the comparative indifference that was still too widely observable in the autumn and early winter to an ardour for battle that should carry the nation far.

How has this magic been wrought? In part by the stirring reports of Greek achievements at the front, in part by the unceasing and eloquent appeals of the patriotic Press and platform. But there can be no doubt that, as the editor of the "Hestia" very shrewdly foretold would happen, the attempted treason of the few young soldiers who listened to the perfidious promptings of German-paid agitators at Lania and Thessaly proved to be the deciding factor. It acted like a galvanic shock, awakening the whole nation from the spell cast over it by the ex-King and his sinister agents. The cry of "Traitors in our midst" was raised, and from every side came indignant protests. Denunciations of those who had taken part in the abortive mutiny poured in on the Court-martial assembled to try them. There were parents who threatened to denounce their own sons, wives their own husbands, sisters their own brothers, and to reveal their hiding-places if they would not give themselves up voluntarily for punishment. As for the people at large it is as though they had been stung into a determination to prove their loyalty and patriotism by furnishing the largest possible quota of recruits to the national army.

EFFECT OF THE EXECUTIONS.
Deceived by the mildness with which they had been treated by the Liberal Government, the band of Germanophiles and anti-Venizelists who form the "Defeatist party" in Greece, had, as seems to be inevitable with persons of this mentality, attributed that forbearance to the weakness of fear. They anticipated that the Government would not dare to strike down the ruffians. In the depth of their self-deception, they thought that any executions following on the death sentences would revolt the feelings of a nation which, it cannot be denied, is constitutionally prone to be, as a rule, lenient with criminals. When the first capital sentences were carried into effect, they gave out, quite possibly half believing what they said, that no executions had really taken place, that the Government had advised the King to reprieve the culprits, not daring to shed Hellenic blood in the cause of the Entente. But they were put to silence when day by day the shootings of ruffians and their civilian accomplices were described with minute detail by the special correspondents of the Athens Press. Still more staggering for these anti-patriots was the temper shown by the people in presence of the retribution exacted from the ring-leaders of the mutiny; a temper which impelled even some well-known opponents of the Government to rally to its support.

What will be the measure of the eventual full co-operation of Greece in the coming stages of the Balkan campaign? Not very long ago, say, in the early days of Mr. Venizelos's Government of national defence, if that question had been asked of any of our people in Macedonia, it would have been met with a shrug of the shoulders. British, French, Italians, Russians, Serbs, were unanimous in their disbelief in the fighting value of Greek troops. The daily spectacle of the unkempt and slouching figures in shabby khaki, listlessly wandering through the streets of Salonika, who—always excepting some really smart Cretans and Epirotes—constituted the Salonika contingent of King Constantine's Army was enough to create the most disparaging impressions.

It must be admitted that the men had then little cause to glow with martial feeling. They had been subjected to a long and studied course of intensive enervation, such as would have worn down the spirit of any troops. It alone men who for the most part had been recently freed from the debilitating yoke of Turkey and had never before borne arms, whatever enthusiasm they had shown when first enrolled in the autumn of 1912, and I can hardly hope personal had long since been rubbed out of them. For over 12 months they had been kept absolutely inactive, practically unutilized, separated from their family and social life, and without any outlet for their energies. They were suffering from the protracted ordeal they were undergoing, and it was necessary to humanize the task, at whose mercy Greece was temporarily placed, but that their wise King had no intention of risking any of their lives in a hopeless contest with Germany, of whose terrific methods of warfare tales were told them by their own officers that could not fail to raise the hair of the sturdiest listeners. They were led to believe in guns each of whose shells could blow up whole regiments, in deadly gases which, if once breathed, made a man "well out like a balloon," and "then burst into fragments." The day when the Entente Allies could be "driven into the sea" was hourly drawing nearer. It would be the day of their deliverance, and then they would realise with gratitude the prudent foresight of the Great Constantine. Meanwhile, they fretted, as the weary months dragged on, their thoughts all with the suffering folk at home and their own idle hands debased from trivial labour.

Yet these self-same men, after only a few weeks of training by Venizelist officers, astonished all observers by the smartness of their drill and their confident bearing, and formed the nucleus of that Greek contingent that has so distinguished itself on the Macedonian front. How soon the whole lot will be ready to take the field will depend mainly on the speed with which the protecting Powers are able to supply the needed equipment.

BRITISH MALAYA AND THE WAR.

In the course of a most interesting lecture before the Royal Colonial Institute, on March 15, Mr. Octavius S. Seal, ex-President of the Associated Chambers of Manufacture of Australia, rendered the following tribute to the services that British Malaya had rendered during the war:

"Of rubber, the British Empire produces about nine-tenths of the world's supply, Malaya having the largest share. And over the wide face of the globe it would be hard to pick more loyal and energetic people than our Malayan fellow-citizens. You may remember that before the war, seeing what was coming, they sent a solid three million pounds sterling to the Mother Country to pay for a first-class battleship to be called the 'Malaya.' It has since been fighting our battles, sure enough, in the North Sea. They forestalled the rest of our Overseas folk to our friendly envy and admiration. You would not suppose that such people would be difficult to deal with in questions of Imperial strength and security. And reflect that two-thirds of the world's tin supplies come from the same region. The great resources of India were exploited to the advantage chiefly of Germany. One of the chief officers of the Indian Civil Service said to me, 'For years we have been running India for the benefit of Germany.' Allowing for hyperbole, there was too much truth in the remark, and it would have been better for Germany had she been less busy in grasping at the still unripe fruit, for her grip of the reins was tightening with each year. High officers of State in England, chosen for office during a generation because of their views favourable or unfavourable, as to Ireland, were anyhow favourable to Germans in India and further India. So Germans were firm in the saddle, and could even use the spur. Moreover, a dozen years ago the Germans bought out German estates in Malaya, and for office acquired a stirrup to his saddle to match his Australian monopoly of metals. A pair of stirrups, and the rule remained docile."
